MISSING GIRL IS FOUND ALIVE

Nellie McFeeley Cochrel Returns to Rushville Saturday, Hearty, Sound and Well

GRAVE GIVES UP THE DEAD

Alarm Felt by the Girl's Parents for Her Safety, Proved to be Unnecessary

The dead has come to life! The body of Nellie McFeeley Cochrel has been found. Indeed it came to this city Saturday evening, animated, walking, living, breathing and full of life and "twice as natural."

The alarm John McFeeley and wife felt for their daughter, fearing Lon Cochrel had made away with her and had placed the body in the vacated Helm property in West First street, was fortunately, unnecessary.

The couple has roamed about in Southern Indiana since leaving here and most of the time they spent in Edinburg, where Cochrel was employed. After arriving here, without ado, they went to the home of a relative in the country, where they intend to live in the future.

Young Cochrel and Nellie McFeeley were first cousins and for that reason parental objections were raised when they announced their intention of getting married. Since then it has been one constant storm and fight involving two or three families. Accusations and denials came as fast as choice gossip at a pink tea, and from the last chapter one would deduct that the principals were merely seeking newspaper notoriety. Since the grave has given up its dead, the stories of the past and any supplement—unless it be a rash act—will be buried with them. Selah for the McFeeleys and Cochrels. All is well that ends well.

MANSFIELD WILL GO TO ANOTHER POST

Consulate at Lucerne, Switzerland, will be Discontinued—A Capable Young Man

According to official word given out at Washington the consulate office at Dusseldorf, Germany, and Lucerne, Switzerland will be discontinued. Robert E. Mansfield, who married Miss Fanny Gowdy, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. John K. Gowdy, of this city, is the consul at Lucerne. In all probability Mr. Mansfield will be transferred to another post as he is one of the most capable men in the foreign service. As yet he has not communicated with the Gowdys here as to his plans for the future.

The Tri Kappa sorority entertained Saturday evening at bid euchre, all the members, the patronesses, Mrs. Will M. Sparks and Mrs. Frank Mull and their husbands, Will M. Sparks and Frank Mull, at the home of Miss Mary Amos. Mrs. Mull won the honors.

TONIGHT

"His Courtship" starts with this evening's issue and it will be your loss if you fail to read the opening chapter. It's a story that is distinctly different and you are sure to like it. Read it right now.

FORMER RUSHVILLE BOY STUDYING VOICE CULTURE

A Washington, D. C. dispatch to the Indianapolis Star Saturday says: "J. Ross Fargo, a former Indianan, of Rushville, but lately from Portland, Ore., is the guest of his cousin, Robert Roy McKahan, formerly of Frankfort, Ind., and Mrs. McKahan in their new home in Sixteenth street. Mr. Fargo is spending the winter in New York, cultivating his voice, a tenor. He sang a few songs at the reception of Mrs. McKahan Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. J. Wesley Boyce assisted Mrs. McKahan."

HAD TO PAY DUES BEFORE EATING

Gentlemen Honorary Members of Ladies Industrial Society Taken by Surprize

THE BATTLE AT MINALLA

Was a Battle at the Festive Board to Make Away With Oodles of Good Things

The Ladies Industrial Society of the Manilla M. E. church entertained the male members at the Woodmen hall last Saturday night. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags, bunting and pictures of Washington conspicuously displayed. Plates were set for eighty and the men were all hungry and were thinking of nothing but the good things to eat, when the president ordered a roll call and suggested wisely that the gentlemen members pay their dues for the year before supper. Not a bite could they eat unless they were in good standing with the society.

The ladies responded to roll call with a yard of pennies; each telling the method by which they earned them. Many different plans had been undertaken to secure the necessary amount, some of which caused a good deal of merriment.

This was followed by an address by Dr. Barnum, who made a brief talk eulogizing the Father of our Country in his usual easy manner. The society was afraid to put Doc's speech off until after supper, fearing he would speak too long. The supper was elegant and those partaking did ample justice to it. The entertainment consisted principally of musical interludes with tableaux, etc. The evening was fully enjoyed by all, and the ladies are to be commended for their good works in many ways as well as preparing an annual feast fit for the gods.

SALVATION ARMY ATTRACTS CROWDS

Large Number Partisipate in Street and Church Meetings—Sunday Afternoon and Night

The Salvation Army held two interesting open air street meetings Sunday afternoon and night, a large horse-shoe of local enthusiastic followers of the work, supplemented with State and District officers, formed on the public square an gave an exemplification of genuine religious fervor by song, testimonials and brief sermons. The services at the Pearl street church were well attended.

RARE TREAT IN CLASSIC ORATORY

Was the Masterly Discourse by Prof. Williams at Sunday's Meeting

SPOKE ON RACE PROBLEM

Displayed Great Talent as a Speaker and Deep Thinker—Crowd was Spellbound

The citizens who attended the Labor Lyceum yesterday received one of the rare treats that this city has ever enjoyed in the way of high class oratory. The meeting was a "monster meeting," many citizens going away because of inability to get into the assembly rooms. But those who were fortunate enough to be seated and remain were greeted with one of the most eloquent addresses ever heard here.

Chairman Tony Schrichte introduced Prof. Williams as "one of the most eloquent orators in Indiana, white or black"—an estimate which the speaker most ably sustained.

His subject was "The Race Problem." The way he handled it showed him to be not only a wide reader, well versed in literature and the theory of government, but a deep thinker who reduces a matter to fundamental principles. He treats the subject in all its essentials and in its final analysis.

One striking characteristic in his speech was the richness and beauty of his language. His command of English is masterly, and but few speakers exhibit his power in the use of a free, flowing poetic diction; clothed at all times were his thoughts in appropriate words and yet free from over profusion.

In the course of his address, Prof. Williams showed that all ages have had class struggles, growing out of peculiar evils in government, and out of false systems of philosophy. He showed the origin of the race problem on this continent and pointed out that it was but one phase of the world struggle that has persisted through the ages. He then discussed at length the so-called "race problem" in America, and exposed the principles involved in it. He proved by good logic that restrictions of opportunity on the basis of color are opposed to the fundamental principles upon which our government is founded. He took up the career of the negro in the republic and pointed out the progress he has made, his service in arms, his devotion to established order and how much he counts as an element of strength to the republic. He deduced the fact that a wise political economy, the principles of morality and republican government, and the claims of common humanity demand a settlement of the race problem along lines of abstract justice.

He declared the American ideal to be equal opportunity to all without restriction as to race or color.

His auditors sat spell bound for one hour and forty minutes and he held the wrapt attention of his hearers to the end of his discourse. Many of those present pronounced the speech the finest they had ever heard, and it can be said with truth that it was one of the very best specimens of classic oratory.

COMING TOMORROW TO UNDERGO AN OPERATION

Connorsville Examiner: The many friends of Miss Stella Bicar, of Springersville, will be sorry to know that her illness has been pronounced very serious by Dr. Sexton, of Rushville, and that it will be necessary for the young lady to undergo a surgical operation before her health may be restored. Her parents, F. Bicar and wife will accompany her to the Sexton hospital in Rushville Tuesday, where Dr. Sexton will perform the operation.

STRENGTH OF WATSON SHOWN

Political Expert Concedes Watson the Nomination on an "Early" Ballot

IS SIMPLY RUNNING AWAY

Other Candidates in the Race Going Like They were Tied—Political Gossip

Robert G. Tucker, the only newspaper man in Indianapolis, who devotes his entire time to the study and writing of politics, both Democrat and Republican of this State, summed up the situation in Indiana in a lengthy review in Sunday's Cincinnati Enquirer, by which paper he is employed as a political expert. His writings may therefore be accepted as authoritative, and it is with a deal of pleasure that we publish part of the review pertinent to the Watson gubernatorial candidacy. Coming as it does from a Democratic-Independent newspaper, it may properly be accepted as a consistent, unbiased, true statement of conditions. Mr. Tucker says:

"It was stated at Congressman Watson's headquarters today that positive assurance has been received from the various counties in which the delegates have been named that over 300 of the 472 are for him on first choice. This is one-third of the delegation. They said today that 300 is a conservative estimate and that the showing he has made is even more gratifying than they had anticipated. The claims of the Watson men are disputed by the lieutenants of the other candidates, but the reports printed following the election of delegates by counties gave Watson over 300.

"Watson's followers say that the most significant feature of the race is the showing he is making in labor centers. He made a clean sweep of Vermillion county, where a large portion of the voters are union miners. Over three-fourths of the delegates from Delaware county are for him. Delaware is a hot-bed of unionism. In every other labor center Watson has obtained more delegates than Wm. L. Tylor of Indianapolis, who is posing as the labor union candidate. In the agricultural communities Watson has led the field by a large margin. In Hendricks county yesterday several farming communities instructed their delegates for him.

"What is pointed to by Watson's lieutenants as another significant feature in his favor is that every county in districts that have no candidates for Governor has given him votes. In all but two or three counties outside the other candidates' districts a majority of the delegates elected are Watson men. His followers say that this showing indicates very plainly that he has a following in every community, and that he will win the nomination.

"The Watson men say that the mask has been torn from the Democratic politicians who are posing as the leaders of the so-called labor movement against him, and that there is no prospect of the Republican union men being misled. The fact that the same Democratic politicians who are trying to incite labor against Watson fought Congressman Chaney, the Republican nominee for Congress in the Second District two years ago, when his labor record was known to be clear, is beginning to dawn on the rank and file of the labor unions.

"An adroit effort is being made now to frighten Republican candidates for local offices in many counties with stories that the laboring classes are against Watson, and it is said that the same politicians who are furnishing the inspiration for the so-called labor movement are planning to run a big bluff on the State convention by bringing to Indianapolis at that time labor men who will say that he must not be nominated.

"Watson's lieutenants are confident now that he will land the nomination early in the convention."

Enters now into the Democratic political arena seeking the nomination for Governor, one O. G. Conn, the band instrument manufacturer of Elkhart. He will "blow his own horn" and "work his own Conn game" to see that a large number get on his "band wagon."

SERVICES WERE VERY INSPIRING

Excuse us while we laugh in your face! For it is to laugh. Some of the younger and more ambitious Democrats who came with the Hearst regeneration in this county remind one of a "town boy" who moves to the country and there expects to teach the country boys a lot of new games and tricks, and invariably finds them turning the tables and tricking him up. We would have a word now relative to that "great, gigantic and colossal idea" born in the mind of some poor unfortunate fellow who thinks he is brainy: we speak of the word passed among the Democrats to the effect that Prof. J. H. Williams, the colored principal, was considering being a candidate for Representative from this county. The trick of spreading such reports is an old one and could not be worked in a blind institute. And it can be said in truth that Prof. Williams has more brains than the person or all the persons who concocted or countenanced such a moss covered move on the political checker-board. When asked about it the professor "jes leffed," and said: "Why the idea, I never even thought of such a thing. It's too preposterous to take the time to refute it."

Word comes from Union township that Jonathan Wilson, the old "Plow Boy of Union" is shying his castors into the political arena this year and comes doubly armed. He is contemplating making the race for township assessor.

Greensburg News: Walter K. Deem, editor of the Knightstown Banner, and a delegate to the State convention, has a four column editorial this week opposing Watson for Governor. Walter was a postmaster that Watson refused to re-appoint, so the Congressman has never looked well to him since that time.

Admission to the congressional convention to be held at Shelbyville April 9th, shall be by ticket, space being reserved for the delegates and alternates and the remainder given over to the public.

George Bliss, formerly of Rushville, now of Indianapolis, was named as vice-county chairman of the Republican Central Committee in Marion county.

Will Fogarty, one of the speakers at the Democratic Harmony Talkfest, was elected county chairman in Indianapolis Saturday after a spirited and blood heat contest, defeating Navin, the Taggart candidate. The fight caused a split-up in the Democracy of Marion county.

Under the apparent calm sea of Rush county Democracy there is a big and turbulent storm shaking the rocks. "There is a split in the party all right," said a well known Democrat Saturday. "What's the difference?" was the sharp retort he received from a brother Republican—"its just like splitting a hair!"

Honestly, it is amusing to hear some of the local Democrats gloat over the "large and enthusiastic" crowds at the Seventy-Five-Cent-Per-Plate-Harmony-Banquet in this city recently. More Republicans turned out to the Rushville township convention than the Democrats could stir up over the entire district, and twice as many Republicans were in attendance at the Eakins public sale last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gray, of Shelbyville, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McIntyre, in North Harrison street, have returned home.

—Mr. and Mrs. Gus Whiler, of North Arthur street, were called to Toledo, Ohio, Saturday on account of illness in the family of a relative.

Isaac Coksey and Clay Matthews, living north of this city, will move with their families to a farm in Kentucky in the near future.

O. E. Humes sold to J. E. Smith, of Springdale, Ohio, a pair of three-year-old Percheron fillies for $100.

—Jet Parker, of the Knecht Clothing Company, was in Chicago today.

Patriotic Meeting at Christain Church Attended in a Body by Orders

MUSIC WAS EXCELLENT

Rev. R. W. Abberley Delivered an Eloquent Address on the Life of Washington

A large audience was in attendance at the patriotic exercises at the Main Street Christian church last evening to hear the patriotic lecture sermon on "Washington, the Statesman, Soldier, Patriot and Christian," which was ably and eloquently delivered by the pastor, Rev. R. W. Abberley.

Members of the Women's Relief Corps, G. A. R. and Patriotic Sons of America attended the services in a body.

The church was beautifully decorated with American flags and Washington's picture hung above the pulpit, which lent enthusiasm to the meeting.

The services were not only patriotic in name, but in spirit also. The songs were very appropriate. Jesse Pugh sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and was heartily assisted by the large audience in the chorus.

The address delivered by Rev. Abberley was greatly enjoyed by the audience and was pronounced by those who heard it to be one of the most eloquent and forcible addresses of this nature ever delivered in this city.

The pastor spoke for almost an hour and held his hearers spellbound throughout the address, while he painted in choicest language a word picture upon the imaginary canvas, depicting the noble deeds of the Father of this Country as a statesman, soldier, patriot and Christian.

The pastor received an invitation from the Patriotic Sons to be a guest at their services this evening and to make a brief talk.

EDITORIALETTES

Some people in Rushville belong to the "400" while others belong to the "650" (the black list) and in rare cases some belong to both.

A woman may make her husband attend a party, but she can't make him look happy after he gets there.

It's wrong to dance—everybody will admit that, and it is likewise wrong not to dance for it is such a delightful occupation.

The Labor Lyceum had a "dark" question under discussion yesterday—the race problem.

If a woman is bad she says a man was the cause of it. If a man is good he says a woman is the cause of his being good. That is the difference in the way they regard each other.

The saloons were closed Saturday and Sunday, and one could almost read an expression on the face of the saloon men which said: "Every day will be Sunday by and by."

3,000 TEACHERS

Are Expected to Attend Annual Meeting at Indianapolis In April.

FINE PROGRAM PREPARED

Among the Speakers Secured For the Convention Is Charles W. Eliot, President of Harvard.

Meeting of Northern Indiana Teachers' Association Will Attract Thousands.

Indianapolis, Feb. 24.—The Northern Indiana Teachers' association will hold its twenty-sixth annual meeting in this city on April 2, 3 and 4 and more than 3,000 teachers are expected to be in attendance. An elaborate program has been prepared, which includes so much that several sessions of the various sections, which compose the association, will be held simultaneously in different halls. Chief among the speakers of the convention will be Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard university; Andrew F. West, dean of Princeton university; Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus of Armour Institute, Prof. Richard Burton of the University of Minnesota, and Edwin H. Hughes, president of DePauw university.

NIPPED IN BUD

Kokomo, Ind., Feb. 24.—"Hold up you hands!" came the stern command to Mrs. E. Murray, who runs a small grocery on Morgan street. The frightened woman, confronted by three young men, masked and armed to the teeth, complied with the request, and as she did so two of the holdup intruders stepped behind the counter to make a raid upon the cash drawer. At this juncture Sheriff Joseph Lindley and Constable Oscar Welty entered the grocery by the back door. There was a lively fusillade of shots exchanged between the officers and the men. Mortimer Bowen was shot, the bullet taking effect in the right arm and shattering the bone. He said that his associates were Frank Phillips and Prince Hatt. They both escaped, but were captured a few hours later by the officers, and are now in jail.

Monroe's New Courthouse.

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 24.—At a meeting of the courthouse dedication committee ex-Congressman Miers of this city was selected for orator of the day. William F. Browning, eighty-four years old, who held office in the old courthouse for forty-six years, and who is at present Republican city clerk, was chosen for chairman of the program. The chaplain will be the Rev. T. J. Clark, pastor of the Kirkwood Avenue Christian church for the last twenty-two years, and the oldest minister in Bloomington. It is expected to dedicate the new $200,000 building in April or May, the date depending on the time the contractors turn the building over. The decorating work is yet to be completed. All the state officers and supreme court judges will be invited, and it will be a gala day in the history of the city and county.

Indiana Student Politicians.

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 24.—More than 200 Democratic students of Indiana university, Democrats of Bloomington and Democrats from other towns in the state gathered in the "Commons" of the student building here Saturday night at a Democratic smoker given by the Jackson Club of Indiana University.

The principal object of the love feast was to arouse enthusiasm and further plans for the annual banquet of the club to be held next term, some time in April. At that time various candidates for office on the state Democratic ticket who will have been selected by the state convention will attend and take part in the program, and other men prominent in the party affairs from all over the state will be invited to be present.

He Courted Death.

Warsaw, Ind., Feb. 24.—Ned Walters, aged eighty-eight years, and his wife Hannah, aged eighty-four years, were buried in the same grave Sunday at Palestine, near here. She died Monday of lung fever at their home in Burkett, and her husband refused to allow the undertaker to inter the remains, saying that he desired to go with her. In accordance with his plan he died Friday night, supposedly of a broken heart. When relatives went through the Walters home they found large sums of money concealed in old bags in various secluded places.

To Talk Over Wage Question.

Indianapolis, Feb. 24.—The coal mine operators and miners of the central competitive field, comprising western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, will meet in joint convention here on Thursday to take up again the consideration of the question of re-establishing an interstate wage agreement.

Teams of the American Association of baseball clubs will open the baseball season on April 15.

DOGFISH CUTLET.

Said to Be as Good as the Best Lobster Ever Eaten.

Dogfish ought to be good to eat, as it is well known that they feed on soles, plaice and flounders. The naturalist hailing from the north Kent marshes with whom I collaborated in various books said that in his boyhood they were much used by the fishing folk and that they were excellent eating, a middle cutlet being considered by many to be as good as the best lobster ever eaten. As a boy he never tired of hearing the fishermen's yarns about how the great savage creatures snapped and fought when they were captured. Lying in the bottom of the boats, they lashed about and bit at the men and at each other. The larger ones would fix on the men's sea boots as they moved about or hang on to their oil-skin fishing coats like bulldogs. A bite from one was no joke.

Dogfish abounded at certain seasons in some parts of the fishing grounds; other parts they avoided. Sometimes the men would go out only to catch dogfish just to reduce their numbers a little. They caught great numbers of them and sold them somewhere farther down the coast, keeping back just a few for themselves and their neighbors. You could get a monster for a couple of shillings.

Couch, the naturalist, says he has known 20,000 of the picked dogfish to be taken at one cast of the seine. Robert Chalmers quoted as follows from the "Journal" of Spalding, the town clerk of Aberdeen: "1642. From the beginning of this year up to June there was a scarcity of whitefish along the east coast to the hurt and hunger of the poor and begging of the fishermen. It was reported that when the fishers had laid their lines and taken fishes abundantly there came one beast called the seadog to the lines and ate and destroyed the haddi bodies and left nothing on the lines but the heads. The like scarcity of fishes to continue so long has scarcely been seen in Scotland, while all other meats were also very dear."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A FAMOUS DUELIST.

This French Fighter Was Gallant as Well as Courageous.

The Marquis de l'Angle-Beaumanoir was in his younger days famous as a duelist. One evening, meeting his cousin, the Marquis du Hallays, in the foyer of the Opera, he walked up to him and in the course of conversation remarked:

"Isn't it odd, my dear fellow, that, quarrelsome as you and I are, we should never have fought with one another?"

"That's true," replied Du Hallays, "but that can always be remedied."

And on the strength of that the two consins met in mortal combat on the following morning, the encounter resulting in the Marquis de l'Angle-Beaumanoir having his right hand pierced by his adversary's rapier, which, while it rendered a continuance of the fight impossible, left the other hand free to grasp that of his cousin in undiminished friendship a moment afterward.

On another occasion when he was about to fight a duel in which he was entirely in the right and his adversary in the wrong he suddenly discovered that his opponent was a perfect novice in swordsmanship and that he would therefore have him completely at his mercy. So he strode up to him and in the presence of twenty or thirty persons presented the most courteous and full apology. Almost dumfounded, the latter inquired why the marquis assumed such an extraordinary course. "Because," he returned, "it would really be too unfortunate if I were to fight with a mazzette (greenhorn)." And with that he made a low bow and then turned his back upon him.

LUNATIC'S DREAM

Has Come True In Great Engineering Feat Accomplished at New York.

"CRAZY LUKE" VINDICATED

Many Years Ago Aged Man Who Gained This Title Was Committed For Advocating Tunnel System.

Tomorrow the Thing That Was Then Declared Visionary Will Be an Accomplished Fact.

New York, Feb. 24.—The century-old task of overcoming the water barriers that have separated Manhattan island from the country of which it is the metropolis, has at last been accomplished. The first tunnel for passenger traffic under the North or Hudson river will be thrown open to the public at noon tomorrow. The event, which spells the eventual doom of the Hudson ferries and marks the completion of another stage of the vast projected system of underground and under-water transportation in the Greater City, will be celebrated officially by the builders and by the highest officials of state and nation and unofficially by tens of thousands of commuters, who no longer will have their going and coming dependent upon fog or ice and ferryboat delays. President Roosevelt, at his desk in the executive offices at Washington, will press a button to signal the opening of the tube, and the governors of New York and New Jersey will participate in the ceremonies at the tunnel mouth.

With the exception of one line of railroad which crosses the Hudson at Albany and then comes in a direct line south to the Harlem river and across that stream into the Grand Central station, all travel to New York from the South and West has been dependent upon ferryboat service. Many of the big steamship lines, with docks on the New Jersey side of the river, also have been compelled to place their passengers at the mercy of the ferries both in embarking for travel abroad and upon landing in this country. Now after thirty-four years of almost constant effort, the problem of boring beneath the surface of the river has been solved and New York has been inseparably joined to the outside world.

The first of the tunnels to be opened is a part of the so-called McAdoo system, thus named in honor of William G. McAdoo, president of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad company, a young Tennesseean whose pluck and energy secured the backing and made the tunnels an accomplished fact. The bore of this first completed means of under-water transportation to the West leads from Morton street on the lower west side of New York to Hoboken, N. J. The tunnel consists of two tubes, in which shuttle trains of eight cars each, propelled by electricity, will be operated. Two more tubes of the McAdoo system are nearing completion. Their Manhattan terminus will be at Cortlandt street—now an important ferry center—and the New Jersey end will be in Jersey City. Both at Hoboken and Jersey City the tunnels have connections with several of the most important railroads leading into the city.

The North river tunnel service is to be still further augmented later on by the opening of the Pennsylvania railroad tubes to connect their lines with the magnificent new station now under construction at Thirty-second street and Seventh avenue. The first of these bores was connected on Friday last. The McAdoo tunnel system includes subway branches under New York city leading from the downtown stations to the heart of the shopping district. The tunnels will also connect with the main subway routes of the city and with the Pennsylvania tunnels.

Many years ago an aged man known as "Crazy Luke" was sent to an insane asylum for continually discussing a tunnel under the Hudson. In 1874 an engineer named Haskins undertook the task, but after completing 1,200 feet of brick tunneling his company failed in 1880. Ten years later an English company was formed and carried the work 1,800 feet further, but after a great loss of life and money the project was abandoned.

Mr. McAdoo was the next to take up the task, and by employing the more modern method of driving a stout steel tube under the river bed, quickly accomplished the work. A feature of the system is the Cortlandt terminal. Two buildings, occupying the front, are of two blocks and rising twenty-two stories above the sidewalk, have been constructed. The train stations are in the sub-basement and the offices will house some 10,000 souls.

Had to Fall Back on Horses.
LaPorte, Ind., Feb. 24.—The American car in the New York to Paris automobile endurance contest left Rolling Prairie at 3:45 Sunday afternoon, drawn by three teams of horses, with shovels ahead. On account of the snowdrifts the car which left New Carlisle at 9:45 Sunday morning had to be towed by horses practically the entire distance. The Italian car reached South Bend at 8 o'clock last night. The American entry's pilot car will be shipped back to Detroit, the chauffeur, John Sperry, being ill.

DOESN'T FEAR DEATH

Says the Writer of Menacing "Black Hand" Note.

New York, Feb. 24.—In a letter signed "Black Hand" and addressed to Commander Braunsrueter, in charge of the United States naval magazine at Iona Island, the threat has been made that the enormous stores of smokeless powder on the island will be blown up unless the married men discharged from employment on the island Jan. 1 last, be put back to work at once.

Secret service men are working to discover the identity of the writer of the letter. Printed by hand, the letter was mailed at the Haverstraw post-office two weeks ago. It was as follows:

"If the married men that were discharged from Iona Island are not taken back at once, all the magazines on the island will be blown up. The writer does not fear death.—Black Hand."

On Jan. 1 between thirty and forty men, civilians who had been employed on the island were discharged owing to delay in forwarding funds from Washington to continue work. Among the men discharged, most of whom were laborers, were many Italians and Sicilians. Every approach to the island is now being guarded day and night by marines, and it is said the civilians employed are being kept under the strictest surveillance.

THE TUILERIES FLOODED

Famous Parisian Garden Converted Into Vast Lake.

Paris, Feb. 24.—The main water pipe of Paris under Tuileries street burst last evening and converted the street into a torrent. Eventually the Tuileries garden became a vast lake. The water flooded cellars in various surrounding streets, extinguishing fires and stopping the dynamos in at least one large hotel, putting the building in darkness. The fire department was engaged for hours in pumping out the water. The broken pipe was patched and the flow stopped for a short time, but another break occurred late in the night, necessitating the calling out of more engines. The whole center of the town has been cut off from a water supply.

Mysterious New York Crime.

New York, Feb. 24.—Gerolamo Cella, a wealthy Italian wine importer, a leading member of the Italian chamber of commerce, and a thirty-second degree Mason, died within a few moments after he was found early Sunday in the office of his warehouse in West Broadway, with his skull fractured and suffering from the effects of poison. His death is shrouded in mystery, according to the police, who are working on the theory that a murder has been committed.

Running Too Close Together.

Cambridge, O., Feb. 24.—On the Byesville Interurban line, a mile from this city, Rose Clancey of this city was killed outright and fifteen injured, five it is thought fatally. The interurban car had just rounded a curve and gone onto a short trestle. A city car was but a few feet behind, and both cars were travelling at a good speed. The trolley of the interurban slipped and the rear car smashed into the one forward, nearly telescoping it.

Steamer a Total Loss.

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 24.—The owners of the steamer Beta have received a cable reporting the total loss of the vessel off Turks Island. She had three saloon, several second-class passengers and a crew of thirty-five, all of whom were saved. The steamer struck about five miles off the island and remained hard and fast on the rocks. The steamer was valued at $125,000 and was insured.

Ohio Comes to a Stand.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 24.—The Ohio river came to a stand here last night at a stage of forty-one feet. The fall will be slow for five days. No suffering is reported, but an epidemic of pneumonia is feared will follow in the wake of the receding waters. The present flood has done less damage than any other in recent years.

Ohio Murderer Arrested.

Chillicothe, O., Feb. 24.—Ed Williams, who murdered Benjamin A. Swigger here Saturday, was arrested Sunday morning after having evaded the officers all night. He had been hiding all night with his three children in a cornfield. No motive for the crime has been given.

Fatal Feud of Farmers.

Shawneetown, Ill., Feb. 24.—Walter Holbrook, a well-known farmer, was fatally shot Saturday night by Fred Norman at Junction, four miles from here. The shooting was the result of an old grudge between the men. Norman was arrested and brought here and placed in jail.

Deed of Drink-Crazed Negro.

Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 24.—Chief of Police Benton of this city was shot dead in front of his home here Sunday just after the churches had been let out, by a negro, Sam Murchison, crazed with drink. This man also shot two negroes a few minutes before he shot the chief.

Churchgoer Slain.

Baxter, Fla., Feb. 24.—While on his way to church, Sunday, Dan Crews, accompanied by his nephew and two ladies, was shot and killed by James Petty. It is said the killing resulted from trouble started several weeks ago. Petty has not yet been arrested.

NEW NATIONAL PARK

Palo Duro Canyon Proffered to the Government by Texas.

WONDERFUL NATURAL FREAK

Site of Proposed Park Excels Yellowstone In Wildness and Beauty. Scenery Is as Impressive and Imposing as Colorado's Grand Canyon.

A national park containing many natural wonders and beauties will be established in the Panhandle of Texas if success follows the movement now on foot with that purpose in view. The Texas state legislature at its last session passed a law ceding to the United States government a large piece of territory for use as a national park, says the Kansas City Star. It is expected that congress will accept the gift and make adequate appropriation for the necessary improvements and assume the care and protection of the property.

Embraced in this proposed park is the Palo Duro canyon, which is said to excel in wild scenic beauties the wonders of Yellowstone park. The Palo Duro canyon begins near the border line between New Mexico and Texas and extends southeast to its outlet in the foothills below the cap rock of the plains. It has a length of about 200 miles. That portion of the canyon which has been ceded to the federal government for national park purposes is about forty miles long and has an average width of about five miles. In many places the canyon broadens to a width of ten miles and more. The walls along its course are precipitous and rise to a height of from 500 to 1,500 feet.

This canyon is looked upon by geologists as a wonderful freak of nature. The country adjacent to it and extending outward for several hundred miles is almost as level as a floor. It is a great depression situated in the very heart of what is known as the Llano Estacado, or Staked Plain. There is such an absence of all ruggedness of formation of the country adjoining it that the giant offset in the earth's surface is not noticeable until almost the very brink of the canyon is reached. It has the appearance of having been created by the sudden dropping out of the bottom of a long strip in the crust of Mother Earth during the formative period.

The wonders of Palo Duro still are comparatively unknown. Its wild recesses never have been explored. Its physical features are wholly different from the bare and monotonous plains country in the midst of which it lies. So little known was this beauty spot that when the bill providing that it should be taken over by the federal government was before the last legislature 90 per cent of the members of that body were unaware that such a canyon existed in the state. It is isolated from the more populous parts of the state, but it is situated close to two railroads. There is an entrance to the canyon within two miles of Canyon City on the Santa Fe railroad, and it may be easily reached from Amarillo and other points on the Fort Worth and Denver railroad. Notwithstanding the proximity of these towns to the canyon but few attempts have ever been made to explore its depths and remote meanderings. It is occasionally visited by ranchmen and sportsmen, and much of the knowledge that is to be had of what is contained between the precipitous walls is obtained from these men. What few explorations that have been made were confined to the more accessible portions of the giant depression. Its grassy valleys afford grazing ground for many cattle. These glades are well known to the ranchmen of this region. There are many rugged features of the canyon which offer an inviting field for daring climbers and explorers. There is a grand mixup of matter in some parts of the canyon. The scenery is as impressive and imposing as that of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River.

PECULIAR PARISIAN DISHES.

Frenchmen's Tired Appetites Treated to Camel and Kangaroo Meats.

Oliver, the chef of the Hotel Ritz, in Paris, is giving new sensations to the jaded palates of Parisian society folk who have complained of the eternal sameness of the menu.

Oliver declares that he has served three kangaroos, seven camels and ten or eleven bears to the habitués of his restaurant. He says kangaroo can now be had in all styles and that no guest ever left a kangaroo feast without ordering another one for some future date. A kangaroo roast for six persons costs $20.

"Camel roast is also becoming very popular," said Oliver, "and the material is easier to procure than kangaroo. We receive young and juicy camel hanches from our African colonies. I am now experimenting with a camel hump ragout."

Oliver has also introduced a number of exotic birds as novelties to whet tired appetites.

Annuity For a Greyhound.

Arthur Taylor Newbold of Bury, in England, left an estate of the value of $18,298 ($91,490). By his will, which has just been proved, he leaves an annuity of £26 (£130) for the benefit of his greyhound Wildfire II, whom the trustees are directed not to part with either by sale, gift or destruction or otherwise, but shall personally see that he is well kept, housed, fed and cared for until he shall die a natural death.

USEFUL NEW WOODS.

Tupelo Found Valuable For Many Purposes.

The scientific study of the merits of many species of trees against the use of which there has been a prejudice for one reason or another is one of the most important phases of the forest work of the government from an economic point of view, and the investigations already made have provided the lumber industry with much valuable information.

The latest discoveries of valuable qualities in a formerly neglected species resulted after an investigation of the tupelo gum, which finds its home in the southern swamps. Tupelo two years ago, at the time the study was begun, was little known and seldom used even in the parts of the country where it is most plentiful. In the cutting of cypress in the gulf states, where tupelo is found in large quantities, the trees were disregarded. It was found that the prejudice then existing against the wood was caused by a lack of knowledge of its properties and lack of care in handling the material. The investigations carried on by the United States forest service have proved the value of the wood for a number of uses. The result of these studies largely removed the prejudices against this gum, and in a short time the demand for tupelo rapidly increased.

The wood is now widely used not only in the states where it grows, but also in distant parts of the United States, in the manufacture of wooden pumps, sounding boards for violins and organs, mantels and interior finishing, such as molding, door and window frames and floor joists. It is also manufactured into all kinds of lumber, including a good grade of edge grain flooring. Tupelo gum in the form of flooring was recently found competing successfully with Douglas fir in the Los Angeles market, even though bearing a freight rate of 85 cents a hundredweight from its sources of production in Louisiana.

This is only one example of the studies carried on by the government for the purpose of creating markets and establishing uses for kinds of wood whose properties are not understood. The reason for making these studies is that by finding substitutes for wood now in use which have grown scarce in consequence of an excessive demand the timber supply of the United States is in effect increased, and the most economical use of wood is promoted, and the evils of a general shortage in supply are to that degree lessened.

DOGS AS MUSEUM GUARDS.

Louvre and Other Famous Galleries to Have Four Footed Guardians.

Inspired by the recent attempt of robbers to effect an entrance to the famous Apollo gallery of the Louvre museum, in Paris, the directors of that institution have decided to follow the example of the Paris police and organize a special corps of trained watchdogs. The minister of beaux arts is now co-operating with the police in the selection of a number of promising dogs, which will be trained to guard not only the Louvre, but the Cluny and other museums.

"The idea has long been under consideration," said M. Homolle, director of national museums, in discussing the subject with the New York Times' Paris correspondent, "and we now expect to put it into realization without further delay. The dogs which we will employ, especially in the galleries where ceramics, miniatures, and other delicate art objects are exhibited, will be small animals useful in drawing the attention of the guardians to any suspicious circumstances rather than in attacking any possible intruder."

"We shall in all probability use fox terriers for the purpose, as they seem to be the most alert and sagacious. The animals will be trained to make a round of the galleries accompanied or unaccompanied by the regular guardians. We expect them to prove of the utmost utility."

ENGLISH SONG BIRD TEST.

Briton Is Stocking America With Skylarks and Finches.

The ambition of Dr. Charles McCutcheon's life seems destined to be fulfilled. The doctor is an Englishman who has lived in Tacoma, Wash., for many years. It was always his great regret that the United States had no song birds such as are found in his native country. By the merest chance the doctor discovered that the skylarks, linnets and bullfinches would thrive in the climate of Puget sound, and he made arrangements during a visit to Liverpool two years ago to have birds sent to him every year for five years.

He brought over the first consignment himself, constructed an aviary, kept the birds over winter and in the spring turned them loose. The birds strayed around the doctor's summer home at Stellacom all year and when nesting time came successfully raised their broods.

The doctor is delighted, and he is expecting another shipment of birds from England which he will treat in the same way. As the climate of Puget sound is similar to that of England, Dr. McCutcheon believes that in time the skylark, linnet and other birds of England and Ireland will be as numerous, as great a delight and as beautiful in song as those of the native country.

Zuyder Zee Reclamation.

The Dutch government has presented to the states general a bill for the reclamation of a portion of the Zuyder Zee at a cost of $11,065,000, the work to occupy several years.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 24.—Beaten in the primaries for the election of precinct committeemen, the famous Marion county Democratic political "machine" was battered and then sunk in a convention Saturday afternoon that elected William Fogarty chairman. It went down, however, with colors flying. The anti-machine sentiment was not to be overcome, and Fogarty won a clean-cut victory by a vote of 75 to 56. Public interest in the contest was intense, not only in Indianapolis, but throughout the state. In the balloting Fogarty and John Navin, the "machine" candidate, ran neck-and-neck until the country precincts were reached. Then came a landslide that sealed the fate of the machine. The Fogarty men were not to be denied a victory, and they turned the ballot into an ovation for their choice. Fogarty was formerly city clerk and is one of the most popular members of the party in Indianapolis. His election is heralded as a victory for the reform element of the party.

John Ruckelshaus, re-elected Republican county chairman here, sounded the keynote of the local Republican campaign when he boldly declared that his party is now on trial here and that its path in the coming campaign will not be strewn with roses. He called attention to the charges of graft in connection with county officials and asserted that the party must leave no stone unturned in ferreting out the men who are guilty and in bringing them to justice. He said that the party deserves criticism because of the looseness of the methods of some of the officials and that to win this year it must punish the guilty and nominate for office men in whom the public has confidence.

The victory of George B. Lockwood of Peru over Senator Edgar Poe Killing in the Miami county primaries is believed to give him a commanding position in the Eleventh district Republican race. His strongest competitor for the nomination for congress is Dr. Good of Warren, who is very popular throughout the district. Good and Lockwood have their counties to start with. The fight will now be carried into Grant county for second choice votes. Lockwood says that he feels that he will win from the field. It is said that nearly all of his opponents attempted to defeat him in his own county.

Hoke Smith of Georgia, who, it is said, will be asked by Eastern and Southern prohibitionists to be the party's nominee for president this year, is not the choice of the party's leaders in Indiana. Prominent men identified with the party here are unanimous in declaring that Governor Smith has not been identified with their issues, and for that reason he should not be considered when it comes to choosing a leader.

There is little doubt that Congressman John H. Foster of the First district will have the field to himself when the time comes for the Republicans to select a successor to him. The congressional convention is to be held at Princeton about the middle of March, and so far no one has announced himself as a rival of the Evansville man for the nomination.

The victory of Howard Maxwell of Rockville, in the primaries in Vigo county, practically closes the contest for the Republican nomination for congress in the Fifth district. It was conceded that he could win if he obtained twenty of the Terre Haute delegates. He elected twenty-four out of twenty-six there and carried a majority of the outlying precincts.

C. G. Conn, horn manufacturer, ex-mayor of Elkhart, ex-member of the legislature and ex-representative in congress from the Thirteenth district, has consented to allow his name to be used as Democratic candidate for governor of Indiana.

The Indiana Civil Service Reform association, through its executive committee, has adopted resolutions opposing the Crumpacker bill concerning the employment of census department clerks.

It would be easy to get rich if it were not for the other fellows who have also thought about it.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

As a result of pressure from other powers, Russia has abandoned her plan of fortifying the Aland Islands.

Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese ambassador to the United States, is expected to arrive at San Francisco during the week.

Former Governor Richard Yates announces that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Illinois.

The situation in the matter of the annexation to Belgium of the Congo Independent state again is assuming a disquieting aspect.

Seven persons were killed and two injured by an Ontario & Western train striking a coach carrying a party of young people, at Nyack, N. Y.

Brigadier General Rufus Saxton, U. S. A., retired, dropped dead at Washington Sunday of heart disease. He was born eighty-four years ago.

Mrs. Augusta Strey, seventy-three years old, committed suicide at Cleveland, O., by setting fire to her clothing. The aged woman considered herself a burden upon her grandson.

Stuyvesant Fish announces that the contest in the Chicago courts to prevent the voting of Illinois Central railroad stock held by the Union Pacific Railroad company is now closed.

A winter carnival for which unprecedented preparations have been going on for several weeks in Havana, was inaugurated Sunday with great enthusiasm. The city is thronged with American tourists.

All circumstances bearing on the trade situation are scanned with the closest attention in Wall street, but conclusions are considerably confused. News of factory resumption from some quarters is contrasted with further curtailment from others.

TO STOP DECEPTION IN WOOD

Bureau of Identification Established by the Government.

It is doubtful if any of the laboratories maintained by the government for scientific research are more unique in character and yet bear promise of more important results than one which has recently been established in Washington by the United States forest service for investigating the structure of commercially important woods. Says a bulletin of the forest service. Laymen will not understand the significance of the proposed investigations carried on in this laboratory so quickly as architects, builders and other wood users who in these days of growing scarcity of the more valuable woods are seriously perplexed in identifying substitutes. Mistakes of this kind in identification have in several instances meant the loss of thousands of dollars and many embarrassing lawsuits.

Nearly any user of lumber can recognize and name offhand all the usual trees of the forest when he sees them growing, and not much difficulty is encountered in identifying the common kind of lumber in a mill yard, because he knows the few trees from which the yard lumber comes. But common kinds are growing scarce, and woods not often cut heretofore are appearing in the markets. The most experienced men are sometimes puzzled when they try to identify them, and persons with less experience have still more trouble. Is a certain wood gum or elm? Is another cucumber, hick or poplar? Is a stick sugar maple or red maple? Doubts may arise whether it is lodgepole pine or fir or whether it is a shingle is cypress or cedar. A dealer may buy red oak and suspect that he is getting something else. There are thirty or more important species of oak. The best lumber dealer might not know which is which in the lumber pile, or if he knows he might not know how to prove it.

Many of these woods look alike, even to the trained eye of the mill man or the builder, and yet they are widely different in value for certain purposes, and it is of the greatest importance to be able to distinguish them quickly and certainly. Again, a new wood may come to a man's notice for the first time, and it may be necessary for him to decide what it is and what it is worth.

The government has been helping individual lumber users for some time, but the facilities have not been near so complete as they are now. It is to meet such needs and answer such questions that the forest service has established the laboratory and placed it in charge of a trained dendrologist. Architects, lumbermen, manufacturers and makers of woodware are already sending in samples of wood for identification and asking if there are not some structural characters by means of which such woods may be conveniently separated for relative species having greater or less value for some specific purpose.

The laboratory will investigate in a practical way. The structure of the woods, sections lengthwise and crosswise, will be studied so as to separate by structure alone the various species of a genus. Analytical keys to the trees of each group will be worked out. These will be based on the arrangement and character of the pores discernible to the naked eye or by a hand lens. The results will be published from time to time, with good illustrations, and placed at the disposal of lumber users.

Republican Want-Ads bring results.

The Well of Invention Is Not Drying Up

By MICHAEL I. PUPIN, Professor of Electro Mechanics, Columbia University.

THE WELL OF INVENTION IS NOT DRYING UP. THE SOURCE IS GRADUALLY SHIFTING, BUT THE SUPPLY REMAINS CONSTANT.

The discoverer sows the seed, the INVENTOR GATHERS THE HARVEST. When this harvest becomes exhausted then new discoveries shift gradually into the foreground and a new epoch of invention makes its start.

WE ARE GRADUALLY SHIFTING NOW INTO A NEW EPOCH OF INVENTIONS. IT IS THE EPOCH OF PRODUCTION OF NEW SUBSTANCES. THE PAST EPOCH DEALT WITH MACHINES FOR GENERATING AND UTILIZING VARIOUS TYPES OF POWER; THE PRESENT EPOCH IS BEGINNING TO UTILIZE THESE POWERS FOR MAKING NEW MATERIALS.

Some of these new materials have a purely scientific interest only. Others, however, are not only scientifically interesting, but they are also of the GREATEST PRACTICAL IMPORTANCE. Take, for instance, the acetylene. In combination with oxygen it liberates an enormous amount of energy per pound. The temperatures obtainable by this combination are far beyond the temperature of the oxyhydrogen flame. A new industry is springing up, the industry of welding plates of steel and of other materials together by the application of the acetylene-oxygen flame. New materials will come which will store up EVEN A MUCH LARGER AMOUNT OF AVAILABLE ENERGY per pound than the acetylene-oxygen combination. New materials will also come which will be far superior in STRENGTH AND DURABILITY to the various steels and bronzes which exist today. The effect of all this upon some of our methods of transportation, like ballooning, automobiling, etc., can well be imagined.

The worker in the field of radio activity is very busy sowing A NEW SEED IN A NEW AND STILL UNEXPLORED SOIL. The seed is the little electron and the soil is chemistry of the atom. Who can tell today what the harvest will be? That it will be RICH no one who follows with a watchful eye the steady trend of events has any reason to doubt.

YES, THE NEW EPOCH OF INVENTION WILL IN ALL PROBABILITY BE MUCH MORE WONDERFUL THAN THE OLD. MEN MAY COME AND MEN MAY GO, BUT THE WAVE OF INVENTION WILL GO ON FOREVER, AND, LIKE TENNYSON'S BROOK, IT WILL GATHER STRENGTH IN ITS FORWARD PROGRESS.

GREATEST LUMBER CUT IN THE UNITED STATES

Statistics by the U. S. Forester which Furnish Food for Thought

More lumber was cut in the United States last year than any other year in its history. The enormous amount of 37,551,736,000 board feet was produced, and the mill value of this was $321,151,338. In addition, there were produced 11,878,260,000 shingles, valued at $24,155,555, and 3,812,877,000 lath, valued at $11,490,570. On the whole, it is safe to say that the present annual lumber cut of the United States approximates 40 billion feet, and that the total mill value of the lumber, lath and shingles each year produced is not less than $700,000,000. These figures give some idea of how vast is the lumber industry and how great is the demand for its products.

A glance at the kinds of lumber produced shows very clearly the passing of white pine and oak, one the greatest softwood and the other the greatest hardwood which the forest has ever grown. Since 1899 the cut of white pine has fallen off more than 40 per cent, while that of white oak has fallen off 36 per cent. To day yellow pine leads all other woods in amount cut, while Douglas fir—and this will be a surprise to many—comes second. Since 1899 the cut of Douglas fir has increased 186 per cent. Louisiana is the foremost yellow pine State, with Texas, Mississippi, and Arkansas following in order. Washington produces by far the greatest amount of Douglas fir.

A comparison of the lumber-producing States show that since 1899 there have been many changes in their relative rank. Washington, which in 1899 stood sixth, now leads, while Wisconsin, which eight years ago led all others, is now third. In the same period Oregon, Louisiana, Mississippi, Idaho, and California made great strides as lumber-producing States, though, on the other hand, the amount produced in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Indiana, and Ohio fell off anywhere from 29 to 54 per cent.

The highest priced native woods are walnut, hickory, and ash, and the cheapest are larch and white fir. From the fact, however, that since 1899 the average increase in the price of lumber has been 49 per cent, it will not be long before cheap woods are few and far between.

Figures upon the lumber cut of the United States in 1906 are contained in Circular 122 of the Forest Service, which can be had upon application to the Forester, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

(Original.)

When the Spanish-American war came on Milton Forester was a lieutenant in the national guard. He received a captaincy in the volunteers and marched away with his regiment amid the plaudits of the throngs who lined the streets. There was one face at an upper window which absorbed all the young soldier's attention, the face of his fiancée, Mary Mills. The look of pride in him and love for him that beamed in her eyes might have exhilarated another, but Forester was a peculiarly sensitive man—a man to dread a possible failure. He knew there were certain men whose constitutional makeup unfitted them to be soldiers, and no man can tell whether he is one of these till he comes to face shot and shell. He dreaded lest he might prove unworthy. Should he falter under the terrible strain of battle he would never see Mary again.

Forester thought too much of this. It is well for one to realize obligations he has taken upon himself, but he should not permit himself to brood over the matter. Forester worried all the way to Florida, from Florida to Cuba and during the campaign until the final fighting, which was the first time he was under fire.

It was during this contest about Santiago that his regiment was ordered forward in the face of a terrible fire. One's first fight is the most trying of all. It is then that the soldier for the first time hears the ugly stinging sound of bullets, the rattle of machine guns and the screech of shells, to all of which there is the background of incessant roar of cannon. Forester looked a little pale, but pressed resolutely on.

All of a sudden he became conscious of a dizzy, nauseating sensation, his foot struck something—or he thought it did—and he pitched forward. The regiment pushed on. Another line of battle came up and was pressing forward when Forester was awakened, as it were, by the sound of a voice. Nathan Burge, an old and tried friend, had seen him, recognized him and stopped to succor him.

"Nate," said Forester, "I've fallen out of the ranks. I hadn't the physical ability to go on. Write to Mary Mills and tell her that I'll never see her again. She has loved a coward."

"Hi, you, there! Move on!" cried an officer who was marching in rear to drive on stragglers. Without a word Burge hurried forward, leaving his friend to his own regrets.

When the fight was over Burge sought Forester, but not finding him, supposed that he had hidden his shame by desertion. He waited for a time, thinking that the coward might turn up, but he did not. Burge's regiment was ordered to the coast at the close of the war and was one of the first to embark for home. When he reached Montauk Point the first person he met was Mary Mills. She had come as a nurse. She inquired eagerly for her lover.

Burge prevaricated. He could not bear to deliver the message with which he had been charged. But Mary, with a woman's quick eye where love is concerned, saw that he was concealing something and assumed that her fiancé had been killed. Burge would much rather have broken such news to her than that he had turned out a coward. At last he told her the truth. Mary Mills went home bowed down with grief.

The next morning she heard one of her sisters reading from newspaper dispatches from Santiago. She was about to leave the room, dreading lest she should hear that her lover had been ordered before a court martial to be tried for cowardice, when his name was mentioned, but in a different way from what she had expected:

Milton Forester, wounded in the stomach. Operated upon and expected to recover. Promoted to be captain, vice John Kellogg, killed.

Forester after being left by Burge tried to rise. His object was to push forward with a view to getting himself killed. But he found himself too weak to rise. At that moment a surgeon with an ambulance corps came hurrying on, making hasty examinations of the wounded lying on the field. Coming to Forester, he saw blood on his clothing, tore open his coat and said: "A bad wound."

"I? Wounded?"

"Yes; in the stomach."

"Thank God!"

The surgeon looked at him with a puzzled expression, but there was no time for words, and after ordering a rescue party to take him to a hospital pushed on.

When the boys of '61 were shot in the stomach there was nothing left for them but to pass the dark portal. Not so in the Cuban war. By that time such progress had been made in surgery that Forester's stomach was laid bare, the wound sewed up, the stomach put back in place, and in time the patient was as well as ever. As soon as it was safe he was put on a transport and sent north. When as a convalescent he walked slowly down the gangway to the dock his friend Burge and his fiancée, Mary Mills, were there to meet him.

"What did you mean," said the former, "by putting up a job on me like that?"

"Well, I'll tell you, Nate. I once asked my father, who commanded a battery in the civil war, how he felt on going into a fight. He said it made him sick at his stomach. I felt sick and I didn't know I'd been struck."

Mrs. Mary Mills Forester, now a matron of thirty-two, says she believes there is a good deal of humbug about "the fearless heroes of war."

Only the members of the family were present, continuing a custom adopted several years ago.

CARRIER PIGEON SPENT SUNDAY HERE

John Dale Kennedy Found it Among his Pigeons in the Hay Loft

While catching squabs for the Sunday dinner yesterday in the hay loft of his father's barn, John Dale Kennedy noticed a strange pigeon among the rest. It was a blue and white bird and he noticed it was larger than the others. The boy chased it about the loft until he finally caught it.

It proved to be a carrier pigeon and had a regulation tag attached to one of its legs with the initials and number "F. Z. 37201" on it.

The pigeon was held captive today at the A. W. Kennedy home in Jackson township and will be well fed and turned loose to resume its flight Tuesday morning.

The funeral services of the late William McDaniel, whose sudden death at his home in Posey township Friday night, came as a great shock to his many friends, were held today at the Christian church near Floyd cemetery, in Shelby county. Burial occurred at the Floyd cemetery under the auspices of the Odd Fellows order at Shelbyville of which he was a member.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

Copyright, 1907, By McClure, Phillips & Company.

In the main this story is a record of the adventures of a young Doctor of Philosophy, who conspires to play the humble role of hired hand at Mr. Morningstar's farm boarding house, that he may have opportunity for serious and scholarly meditations, and avoid the blandishments of fascinating young lady boarders. The resulting complications make a story as rich in humor, as provocative of laughter, as any that has been written in recent years. The characters are as interesting as one's intimate friends. In fact, they shall become the reader's good friends to be carried afterward in pleasant memory. There is a lovely and stately young woman who would return to nature and incidentally uplift mankind in the returning, and there is a vivacious beauty who aspires to follow this lofty example, but who fails for reasons which will interest and delight the reader. And there is another girl—Lord love her!—who shall give example of the heroism of humble life and prove anew the old truth that blood will tell. As for our hero, we shall love him in spite of his awkwardness, bashfulness and learning. There shall enter also, late in the history, a woman of the great world, who shall pay with no hesitation the debt that is due to honor and a good old name. A charming story, which shall exact the tribute of tears, as well as laughter, and teach many a good moral and leave the reader in a mood at the end to invoke a blessing upon the good and bright woman who wrote it.

CHAPTER I.

DR. PETER KINROSS had just been demanding rather irritably of the shaggy little farmer, his host, why a bathroom had not been put into the house when it was renovated for summer boarders, and the farmer, standing over him as he sat at his belated breakfast in the kitchen, was replying with a logic which left his protagonist dumb.

"Firstly, it's contrary to Scripture."

"How the devil do you make that out?" Kinross inquired, unaware of how such epithets startled the unaccustomed ears of the farmer's wife and of the girl, Eunice, who waited on him.

"How I make that out?" Morningstar repeated. "Because the Scriptures are silent on the subject."

Which of course left Kinross with nothing to say. He lifted his glass of skimmed milk and sipped with half closed eyes.

"Another reason," Morningstar laid it off, "there was less sickness among our ancestors of bygone times in the past than there is now when bathrooms is the common lot of all."

Kinross did not contradict it.

"Again, I once heard of a man being drowned in a bathtub of hot water."

Kinross had no answer for an argument so incontrovertible.

"And yet again, Gawd certainly intended fur the folks to wash in cold water or he'd of made all the water hot."

Kinross' silence apparently accepted this dogmatic statement.

"Kin you deny it?" Morningstar triumphed over him.

"I would not presume to."

"I guess anyhow not. Well, then, you know why I don't have no bathroom. If folks would read more in the Book and hesitate more they'd see how sinful some things is. Folks is just a little ignorant about some things. They're not 'enough loosed of the world. Pride has come into the church that it's something shameful. There's too much joining church to enjoy ourselves instead of to serve Gawd."

And, swelling with his easy success, old Morningstar shambled out of the room, leaving his defeated boarder to the contemplation of his impossible breakfast.

simply furnished, but spotlessly clean and of a certain homely coziness.

The breakfast consisted of cold corned beef, greasy sausage, several kinds of very pale, lardy looking pies and a plate piled high with iced cake.

"Eunice!" Mrs. Morningstar shrilly called to the young girl, her adopted daughter, who had disappeared into the outer kitchen. "Here's the Doc eatin' dry bread and butter yet! Where's the spread?"

The relevancy of this inquiry not being apparent, a "spread" in Dr. Kinross' vocabulary being an outside cover to a bed, he glanced up as Eunice appeared in the doorway to listen to her answer, though, to tell the truth, he was not so curious to learn where the "spread" was as to hear the sound of the girl's voice. In the ten days that he had spent at the farm he had not once heard her utter a word, though he saw her three times a day at the table. This strange silence, with some other inexplicable things about her, had begun to "get on his nerves."

He had come out to this farm to be quiet and undisturbed, and here, rather to his chagrin, was a mystery rising on his horizon.

He waited, with his glass halfway to his lips, to hear the girl's reply.

She came across the kitchen carrying a dish of apple jelly in one hand and a saucer of apple butter in the other. There was a grace in the movements of her young, slim figure that was conspicuously lacking in Mrs. Morningstar's own daughter of the same age. Her eyes were, as always, downcast, as though to veil a soul she did not wish to discover to those about her. Kinross had never yet succeeded in discovering the color of her eyes. Somehow the girl always bore about her an air of detachment from her surroundings, almost like one moving in a dream. Just now she scarcely seemed conscious of him at all as she placed the two dishes on the table before him and then turned and walked out of the room.

His piqued curiosity increased his sense of irritation with things in general to positive ill temper. This dainty looking adopted daughter of the household, who, he had at first thought, must be a fair lily among gross weeds, so delicate her features, so graceful her movements and so appealing to his poetic sense her frail beauty (in spite of his professed misogyny)—even she was probably no exception in the generally bucolic atmosphere of the Morningstar farmhouse, for a more cowlike herd of people he had certainly never encountered.

Was she not an exception? Then why this constantly deepening impression on his mind of an indefinable charm, a vague mystery, enveloping the beautiful girl who drugged at her household tasks in apathetic and stupid contentment with apparently not a thought or instinct above her narrow, monotonous round of work; too dull even to share the curiosity and interest of the rest of the family concerning their "gentleman boarder," and too phlegmatic to resent her foster mother's unjust and often tyrannical partiality to her own daughter Ollie?

More than once he had been on the point of asking Mrs. Morningstar to tell him something of Eunice's history. But some subtle instinct which he had never analyzed had held him in check. Perhaps it was a chivalrous aversion to prying into what the girl herself so evidently wished to conceal. Perhaps he was not, after all, in a hurry to have the interesting mystery explained away into a mere commonplace circumstance, the usual outcome of interesting mysteries.

"Well," he demanded of Mrs. Morningstar when, after Eunice had disappeared, the landlady stood beside him and refilled his glass with milk, her stout bulk a grotesque contrast to the insignificant stature of her husband, who had been overpowering him with his logic a few moments before, "where is the spread? She didn't tell you."

"But she brang 'em!" exclaimed the woman in astonishment. "Here!" shoving toward him the jelly and the apple butter.

"The spread?" he repeated blankly.

"Ain't them spreadin'?" she asked, a touch of wounded feeling mingled with her puzzled surprise. "To be sure, some calls 'em the smear. But," she added discriminately, "I think that's Dutch!"

To propitiate her he helped himself experimentally to some of the apple butter.

"We're gettin' two new boarders till this dinner a'ready," she remarked, pushing a pie within his reach, though she must know by this time that he never ate her pies, not even at breakfast.

Her statement appeared to be a blow to him. Thrusting the apple butter from him, he stared up at her, chagrin and keen disappointment in his face.

"Mister he goes this dinner to fetch 'em on the buggy out," she informed him. "One of 'em's overstudied the brain goin' to college. Yes," she insisted argumentatively, "there is such a thing as overstudin' the brain, especially fur a country person where ain't used to it still. To be sure, you bein' a doctor that way, you'd know yourself the brain kin be overstudied."

He did not rouse himself to explain to her that he was not a doctor of drugs, but of philosophy. It would involve so many questions on her part and so much explanation on his—and the day was already hot.

"Do you think you'd better risk taking two more boarders?" he asked her doubtfully with the faint hope of averting the impending calamity. "Won't it give you a lot more to do? And you are busy from morning to night now."

"You think?" she laughed. "Och, no, I ain't overworked. I can stand a good bit yet. You's tony towners with your such wonderful white hands—even on the men," she added, unable to keep a bit of contempt from her honest voice, while her eyes rested on Dr. Kinross' capable looking but well kept hands as he daintily knocked off the top of an eggshell, "you's don't know what work is. Anyhow, if it does overdo me to take two more boarders it'll be a little on the make, too, you see."

"Ah!" he exclaimed, his gloom lifting a little. "I'll pay you the price of board for three if you'll send them word not to come and let me continue to have the run of the place in peace."

Mrs. Morningstar's fat face grew long in astonishment. Such a reckless and apparently pointless waste of money was a thing incomprehensible to the Pennsylvania Dutch mind.

"Are you some bashful or what?" she curiously inquired.

"I guess I'm what. Come, will you do it?"

"Are you passin' a joke mebbe?" she questioned uncertainly.

"Never was a man more serious. I'm willing to pay for the rare quiet I've enjoyed out here the past ten days. Will you send them word they can't come?" he urged.

"Now, if you'd only spoke sooner!" she said regretfully. "To be sure, it would of paid better to get the price of three fur one. But pop he wrote 'em a postal in, last Saturdays a'ready."

"Any other young feller as good a looker and as tony as what you are yet would be glad fur two young lady boarders comin' oncel!" she reasoned, following him to the door, her whole person radiating her curious wonder.

Kinross stopped short on the threshold and turned upon her. "What! Two girls!"

The consternation in his face increased her wonder. "Well," she argued, "what's the matter with that? A body can't help fur her sex, can she?"

"I certainly didn't anticipate when I came here that I'd be bothered with two girls on the place! They'll expect me to be sitting around with them!"

"Och, well," she poked him playfully with her elbow, "you might be glad if they do want you to set alongside of 'em. Is it that you ain't much fur sociability that way?" she tried to solve the problem. "You never looked scared of Ollie or Eunice."

"They have some sense. They don't cackle at me. They let a man alone. The first girls I ever saw who did."

Mrs. Morningstar laughed boisterously. "An' here I was tellin' Ollie every day since you come why didn't she perk up and speak some conversation to you that way. It ain't that Ollie's ignorant that makes her keep so quiet before you," she came to the defense of her daughter. "But she's some backward, you bein' a townier and her, she was always a country girl still."

"She talks a good deal more than Eunice does, though, doesn't she?" he put out a feeler.

"Och, her," she retorted contemptuously; "she's dumm!" (Stupid.) "But Ollie she's got an elegant education," she affirmed, standing in the kitchen doorway, with her bare arms resting on her ample hips, while Dr. Kinross leaned against a pillar of the porch, his eyes following the young chickens which ran about on the grass. "I left her go to school till she was fifteen a'ready. Eunice she was more fur books and studyin' and all like that than what Ollie was, but," she said disparagingly, "she ain't got Ollie's nice education, but her bein' just adopted that way and not my own flesh and blood I took her out of school till she was twelf. She cried wonderful to be left keep on. But I tole her beggars couldn't be choosers and she must earn her livin'." So then she never said nothin' more about it. Ollie she can converse pretty."

Mrs. Morningstar suddenly dropped the subject of her foster child and returned to the more congenial theme of her own daughter, as she jealously observed that the mention of Eunice seemed to arrest the wandering attention of her hearer. "And Ollie she knows just the right words to put in—but sometimes she's so stubborn headed fur me she won't converse—like what she's been since you come. But to be sure," she conceded, "if you like 'em better quiet"—she paused uncertainly, but her look and tone implied that that altered the case and involved her forgiveness of Ollie's obstinacy in refusing to display her conversational powers.

"Eunice has had no schooling since she was twelve years old?" Kinross instantly asked when Mrs. Morningstar's pausing to take breath gave him a chance to put in a question.

"No, and she's wonderful dumm to ward what Ollie is."

"Humph!" he grunted.

"Yes, and that ongrateful she is fur all we done fur her yet—us leavin' her go to school till she was twelf a'ready and her not our own flesh and blood—and then when she had to come off of school she took on; it was somepin awful!"

"But a twelve-year-old girl is hardly capable of realizing what she is losing in having no schooling?" he said questioningly.

"She was always wonderful fur studyin'—full much so. A body couldn't get no work out of her oncel she got holt of a book—and that's why pop he sayed now she must come off of school, he sayed, or she'd soon not be earnin' her feed."

"Umph!" again granted Kinross, surprised into a pang of pity for the flower-like girl who was the household drudge to the farmer's family.

"Say," Mrs. Morningstar abruptly demanded, "do you want fur me to tell these here two young ladies when they come that you ain't much fur sociability and that they're to leave you be and not bother you any, you bein' some queer?"

"Now, Mrs. Morningstar," he smiled, "you are a friend in need. Suppose you do warn them off. Where are they from?"

"From Ito town. Their names is Georgiana Ellery and Daisy Parks."

Kinross lifted his head and looked at Mrs. Morningstar, surprise, annoyance, consternation, in his face.

"Gods and little fishes!"

He pulled his Panama hat over his eyes, turned abruptly and strode away. Mrs. Morningstar stood stolidly where he left her, gazing after him as he walked with long steps through the orchard toward the woods where he usually spent most of the day, and finally she shook her head and drew a long breath.

"It beats me what fur a man he is, anyhow!"

AMUSEMENTS

Skating at the Kramer rink tonight and every night. Good crowds, good order and good music. Everybody goes to the rink.

The Vaude and Grand will have a change of program tonight and a high class bill is offered at both houses. The motion picture theatre has come to stay and now is as staple an enterprize as the cigar store or soda fountain.

"Bud Hicks, the Yankee, Doodle Boy," Powell & Cohan's big success comes to the Grand next Friday, February 28th. It is termed a comedy-drama with music because of its intensely interesting story, its hilarious comedy element and its ten big song hits. If you want to slyly wipe away a tear at an occasional sweetly pathetic scene, thrill the next moment at a strong dramatic situation, be laughing until your sides ache the next at good honest comedy and be applauding some catchy musical number the next moment don't miss "The Yankee Doodle Boy." The scenery is beautiful and the cast clever. Seats on sale at Hargrove & Mullins.

At the Auditorium in Connerville one of those good, old pastoral plays "Our New Minister" will be given an excellent cast, scenery and accessories. It is of the "Old Homestead" and "Way Down East" type, and has been pronounced better than either. A play of pure, sweet, country life that does not require a "rube" quartette to garher aroun pump or chickens to be "shooed" upon the stage, nor hay and straw to be scattered about to give it local color and atmosphere, for the very lines of the play team with that refreshing odor of new mown hay. Wholesome comedy and pathos happily blended makes it a high class production. Seats can be procured at the local I. & C. office of Frank Lyons.

FUNMAKERS FOR PANAMA.

Women Musicians Sent to Amuse Uncle Sam's Canal Diggers.

Probably never before has any one sailed on a government mission of fun-making and entertainment, yet such is the commission of Ruth Anderson, violinist; Katherine Rogers, soprano; Frida Ohling, contralto, and Laura Cope, pianist, who started the other day on the steamer Colon for the isthmian canal zone. Their departure is the first step in the plan of the government to afford wholesome entertainment and amusement to the toilers on the canal.

The concerts will be given in the Young Men's Christian association clubhouses at Colon, Panama, Empré and Culebra. The programme will be arranged to appeal to all classes, "rag-time" going along with classics. Eight numbers will be given at each concert, not including encores, and the latest airs along Broadway will soon delight the workers.

"We expect to be gone four weeks," said Miss Anderson, the leader of the party. "In that time we will give eight concerts, two in each town. The party will be met by the secretaries of the Young Men's Christian association branches, who have worked out all the details of the trip."

Ready Smile, Girl Club's Aim.

Frowns are tabooed in a new club formed by ten little girls of Wade Park school, in Cleveland, O. The members of the club must, under the rules, smile all the time and make the world as cheerful as they are able. Any member whom the club monitor spies frowning must pay a fine at the next meeting of the club.

Of course the fines are not paid in real money. Instead each little frowner must sing a song, speak a piece or play the piano for the delectation of the more cheerful members of the club. Meetings are held every two weeks. On each occasion the small hostess is given a souvenir spoon.

Move to Preserve the Elder Duck.

Through the efforts of William Dutcher of New York city, president of the National Audubon Societies, an attempt is being made to preserve and propagate the elder duck, now almost extinct. This bird was once found in large numbers all over New England. A bleak island near Grand Manan has been selected, and a hundred birds have been placed there to start the work in charge of Captain Frederick E. Small of the Cross Island life saving station.

SHOCKING CRIME

Anarchist at Denver Slays Priest After Partaking of Holy Communion.

KNEELING AT ALTAR RAIL

Vile Assassin Pressed Revolver Against Body of Priest Whose Hand Had Administered the Wafer.

Gloating Over His Horrid Deed Italian Anarchist Regrets He Had Not Killed More Priests.

Denver, Col., Feb. 24.—Father Leo Heinrichs was shot and killed when administering the sacrament at early mass in St. Elizabeth's Catholic church, Eleventh and Curtis streets, this city, at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. Kneeling at the altar rail, between two women, Alio Guarnaccio pressed the muzzle of a revolver against the body of the priest, after receiving the consecrated wafer, and shot the priest through the heart. Exclaiming "My God, My God!" Father Leo fell prone in front of the altar and died without uttering another word.

With an inarticulate scream the assassin sprang into the aisle and dashed to the door. For a moment the hundred or more people in the church were dazed, then became panic-stricken. Women fainted and many became hysterical. Several men rushed to the aid of the priest and others started in pursuit of the murderer. Among the latter was Patrolman Daniel Cronin, who overtook the fleeing Italian on the steps. Guarnaccio made attempts to shoot the policeman, and was foiled and overpowered only against desperate fighting in which several men had come to the assistance of the officer. The murderer was hurriedly removed to the city jail.

Guarnaccio made the following statement: "I just went over there because I have a grudge against all priests in general. They are all against the working man. I went to the communion rail because I could get a better shot. I did not give a damn whether he was a German priest or any other kind of a priest. They are all in the same class.

"I left Italy three months ago; went first to Central America and then came to the United States and to Denver. I am an anarchist and I am proud of it. I shot him, and my only regret is that I could not have shot the whole bunch of priests in the church. I am a shoemaker, but have not worked since coming to Denver."

Father Leo was born in Koeln, Germany, Aug. 15, 1867. He came to Denver last September from Paterson, N. J.

An examination of letters taken from Guarnaccio showed that the only definite address he appeared to use was No. 10 Waller Place, Wakefield, Mass. Guarnaccio told Chief of Police Delaney that he started out Sunday morning with the intention of killing four priests. Had he succeeded in eluding capture, he says, he would have gone from one church to another until his vow had been carried out. Guarnaccio displayed no remorse for his crime, and reiterated his previous statement that he believed he was benefiting the poor people by taking the life of the priest. He said that the church kept the people poor while priests lived on the fat of the land.

Among the papers taken from the assassin was a list of assassinations from the murder of Czar Paul of Russia in 1801 to the killing of the King of Portugal within the last month.

Australia Is Anxious.

Melbourne, Australia, Feb. 24.—Australia wants the American fleet of battleships, now on its way to San Francisco, to come to this country. The government already has given the matter due consideration and a letter has been sent to President Roosevelt inviting the fleet to visit the chief Australian ports. As yet no reply has been received here, but the prime minister, Alfred Deakin, has issued a statement in which he said: "If the invitation is accepted, the reception given the fleet at Rio Janeiro, Valparaiso and Callao will be eclipsed by Australia. The visit would mark a new era in the history of this part of the world."

Shot Daughter and Self.

New York, Feb. 24.—As a climax of a long series of troubles between his wife and himself, George VanPelt, a tugboat owner and captain, shot and fatally wounded their eight-year-old daughter Ruth last night and then fired two bullets into his own brain. Both will probably die. VanPelt and his wife have lived apart for a year. The tragedy last night occurred during a visit VanPelt made to his wife. When he tried to coax his little girl to spend the evening with him at the theater her refusal angered him and the shooting followed.

Death Ended the Address.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Mrs. Sophia Jacobsen fell dead as she completed an address before the Free Thinkers society in a hall here last night. Heart disease was said to be the cause.

TAFT'S STAGE FRIGHT.

Secretary's Son Hears Father Make a Speech and Embarrasses Him.

Robert Alphonso Taft, son of Secretary Taft, heard his father speak in public for the first time the other night in Music hall at New Haven.

Young Mr. Taft is a sophomore in Yale, and he went to the banquet of the Young Men's Republican club at the invitation of a member.

When Secretary Taft arose to speak he caught his son's gaze as the young man proudly, but anxiously, watched and listened. Secretary Taft said afterward to a friend:

"It was the first time the boy had heard me make a speech. He looked so fearful that his father might break down that for a few moments I was quite embarrassed by his glances."

"Success leads to insolence," says an old Irish proverb.

DARING FIRING TEST.

Navy Wants Twelve Volunteers as Target For Gun.

THEORETICALLY IT IS SAFE.

Proposition Is That Volunteers Shall Man Turret of Monitor When Shell Hits It—Sixty Ton Gun to Fire Huge Shot at Eleven Inch Armor Belt.

The navy department has under consideration probably the most startling test of the penetrating power of shells, danger to life and the resisting power of armor that ever has been tried in any of the world's navies.

The proposition is to have the monitor Arkansas, now being prepared for the test, fire a twelve inch shell weighing 850 pounds from a sixty ton gun a distance of two miles and have it strike the turret of the Arkansas sister vessel, the Florida. The astounding part of the affair is the proposition to have in the turret of the Florida at the time of the impact a full turret complement of twelve men.

The question of having a crew in the turret was discussed at great length at the navy department the other day. All, figuring on paper, taking in the weight of metal thrown, the heat generated by the impact, the resisting power of armor and other details, indicates that the men in the turret would come out unscathed except for the shock, but still, of course, there is no record in existence of a monitor, the turret protected by an eleven inch armor belt, being struck plumb by a twelve inch shell of 850 pounds weight. All figures are of a necessity theoretical. Still it is the belief that a volunteer crew can be secured to remain in the turret at the time of the experiment.

The possibility of the shot missing is small. All shots are now fired from geometrical deduction and with machine precision. The shell will doubtless land just where intended, and then if the theory of the naval experts holds good it will be deflected and the turret left uninjured. Rear Admiral Mason, chief of the bureau of ordnance, and Lieutenant Commander Sellers discussed the matter. The first plan was to place twelve dogs or pigs in the turret and see the effect upon them, but the proposition of a volunteer crew is now under advisement. The Arkansas is at Norfolk, and the Florida is near by.

Naval attaches from all parts of the world have heard of this test and are anxiously scrambling for an opportunity to witness it, but the department has declined all applications. In fact, it is said that the test will be made far at sea, so that observations and deductions by foreign powers cannot be made.

So great is the fighting spirit of the navy and so courageous the men of the line that already news of the proposed test has leaked out, and a volunteer crew is said to be ready.

Admiral Mason will give no information on the subject, and many false rumors have obtained. One of the misleading statements published was that the Florida was to be towed to a point on the Potomac river and fired at from a gun on shore. The real facts of the story developed only recently. One of the problems discussed is how valuable the experiment would be as showing danger to life if the turret were empty when the shell struck it.

From what has leaked out it is learned that, as the crew for the Arkansas is about to be selected and she is to be put in commission probably before the end of February, letters have been received at the department protesting against the plan of letting the Florida be shot at without the courtesy of a reply.

The Florida's crew would like also to test its gunnery and shells of 800 pounds at the turret of the Arkansas. The crew of the Florida is aware, of course, that the Florida cannot possibly be destroyed by a shell hitting the turret or even penetrating it, and they hold that there would be no more damage to the Arkansas than to her sister that has been selected for the martyrdom.

As a matter of fact, in case the shot from the Arkansas should by any chance go wide, some officers think that there would be no objection to the Florida taking a shot for the same purpose at the turret of the Arkansas. The result of such a duel would be no more serious than if only one vessel fired. The bureau of ordnance and the navy experts generally regard the experiment as one which will add a great deal to the practical knowledge of the experts in ordnance and gun fire. The place selected will in all probability be off the capes near Norfolk.

NEW PREMIER IN SIGHT

Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman May Not Resume His Place.

London, Feb. 24.—The session of parliament, up to the present comparatively uneventful, began today a busy and important week with the introduction of a new education bill and the publication of the naval estimates, over which there is said to have been much divergence of opinion in the cabinet. On Tuesday the government will make a statement on the Macedonian situation and the Congo debate will occupy Wednesday. The licensing bill, one of the government's principal measures, will be taken up on Thursday, and on Friday the woman's suffrage bill. The health of Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman, the prime minister, is improving, but very slowly. There is not the slightest hope that he will be able to resume active leadership before Easter, even if then, and the party is beginning to take for granted the advent of Herbert H. Asquith as premier, which would be an important development in many ways, as Mr. Asquith is the leader of the imperialist section of the cabinet, while Sir Henry leads the radical section, which is committed to home rule and other advanced measures. As Mr. Asquith heads the influential position of chancellor of the exchequer, his appointment as premier would give his party enormous strength, which might result in some modification of the policy of the cabinet as a whole. Rumors that the premier has already proposed to resign, however, are unfounded. It is understood that the naval estimates will show an increase of about $5,000,000 over last year, the shipbuilding program being a modest one.

ON GOOD BEHAVIOR

American Jackies Create Fine Impression at Lima.

Lima, Peru, Feb. 24.—Sunday was a day of sight-seeing for the men of the American battleship fleet now lying in the harbor at Callao. More than 3,000 of them came ashore during the day, the majority of whom spent the time in Lima visiting places of amusement and buying souvenirs in the shops kept open for their benefit. Others took short excursions on the railroads to nearby points of interest, while many stayed close along shore around the bay of Callao. The conduct of the thousands of bluejackets and marines was admirable, as they all seemed bent on getting as much pleasure as possible on their shore leave.

Annual Meeting of "Sons."

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 24.—The annual meeting of the Indiana society, Sons of the American Revolution, will be held here Tuesday. The business sessions will be held in the parlors of the Terre Haute house, and the annual banquet will be served in the hotel at 7 o'clock. Charles W. Moores of Indianapolis will preside at the banquet.

MANKIND IS BAD BY NATURE

For the Old Adam Stock is Bad, Said Evangelist Willis in His Sermon

SETS FORTH A REMEDY

Men Must Prepare to Meet Their God and Master—"Smashing the Tables" Tonight

One of the largest audiences that has assembled to hear Evangelist Willis was out Sunday night and were created to a masterly discourse.

The burden of Mr. Willis' remarks were in effect that unfortunately we do not see ourselves as others see us: that were we to hold up a mirror and behold our true selves, what a ghastly sight would meet our vision, and how in all probability, we would then strive to correct the toilet of our manner and soul along with the toilet of persons.

"Prepare to Meet Thy God" was the emphatic admonishment given by the evangelist. He declared it to be the supreme question in life, and there was only one ground—through the blood.

Men are all bad by nature, he said, for the old Adam stock is bad, and we cannot bring forth good fruit until we are grafted into the one True Vine—God.

Mr. Willis then asked his auditors to answer to themselves a number of questions he would propound, and see how they measured up to the standard demanded by our Saviour.

The sermon was a most forcible one and four came forward at the close of the services. Mr. Willis was assisted by his wife and the choir in the singing service.

Tonight the evangelist will preach on "Smashing the Tables."

HARRIE JONES WILL BUILD NEW BARN

It will be Finely Appointed Throughout and Contain Forty Stalls

Harrie Jones will build a finely appointed modern barn at Riverside Park during the month of May, where his large stable of horses will be quartered during the winter and training season. The barn will have forty stalls and a wide airy "foyer." It will be located on the site where the old barn burned a few years ago.

ANNUAL REUNION AT MASONIC LODGE

Class of Fifty will Receive Degree Work on Wednesday Evening

The Rushville Council No. 41 R. & S. M. will hold their second annual reunion at the Masonic Temple in this city on Wednesday evening, which promises to be one of the most elaborate functions of the season.

The program committee has sent out program and invitations to resident and non-resident members, who are sojourning in this jurisdiction.

A class of fifty members will receive the super-excellent master's degrees on this occasion. Several State officers are expected to be present.

In connection with the exemplification of the super-excellent master degree an elaborate banquet will be served.

The following program will be followed:

Reception, 5:30 to 6:30.
Banquet 6:30 to 7:45.
Degree, 8:00 to 9:30.
Reception, 9:30 to 11:00.

SOCIALISTS TO TAKE THE REINS

Next Speakers at Labor Lyceum will Give the "Dopey Dream" Stuff

PROMOTE STREET TALKERS

Clever Idea of Local Dreamers to Catch the Crowd, is What Some are Saying

Yesterday's meeting of the Labor Lyceum at the court house marked the close of speakers on general topics for the time being at least. The next speakers will be Socialists who have heretofore spoken on our street corners. Some are of the opinion that the few Socialists in Rushville, cleverly put on the bitter pill of Socialism a sugar coating of the first few meetings in order to get a crowd afterwards to listen to the doctrines of that "dreamy dope."

From now on the attendance will likely be composed of the Socialists and a handful of their friends, who do not believe as they do, but go after earnest solicitation and suffer to hear speeches of attack on everything but that impossible thing, Socialism. From now on they had better hold their meetings out of doors; in this way they might catch the usual hangers on around the business district.

Socialism is fast dying out. In that hot-bed of foreigners—Chicago—where a majority of the men enlisted in the cause of Socialism could not speak the English language at the last election, they were completely snowed under, hundreds of converts deserting the cause when they went to vote for after a few years residence in this great and glorious land of the free, they saw how absolutely false and unnecessary were the Socialistic teachings. The party has now joined ranks with the Populists, who at one time bid fair to corral a big vote.

ALL, YES ALL FOR MARION COUNTY

If They Could Think of Anything Else they Surely will Order it

John C. Ruckelhaus, chairman Marion county Republican committee in his acceptance speech Saturday said among others things "This is a year in which we should be more careful in naming our ticket, for many reasons, the most important of which is that the next Republican nominee for the presidency will hail from Indiana."

"We owe it to the Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks, as well as to the Republicans of Marion county, to be cautious, so that no not of ours can be said to have hindered his election. Let our conduct and candidates be such that it will be said that this organization not only helped nominate the President, but also by piling up a good, large plurality in Marion county, helped to elect him."

"We ought to be cautious for another reason. We will have our fellow-townsmen, the Hon. Harry S. New, at the head of our national committee."

"And you, gentlemen, know as Marion county goes, so goes the State of Indiana, and as goes the State of Indiana, so goes the nation."

"Now, let me give you another of the many reasons why we should be cautious. We are going to nominate the Hon. William L. Taylor for Governor. Why should we nominate Mr. Taylor? Because he is qualified in every respect for the position he seeks. His public record in the past has been such that he will command the confidence of all good Republicans, as well as those of the Independent voter. Because he is from Marion county, and because he will be at least a thousand votes stronger in Marion county than any other candidate we could nominate."

Is there anything else that Marion county wants? If so, do not be at all backward. Just let it be known in good time for the State convention to take due notice thereof.
